

Cross-Border Investigations

Skadden

Skadden's global resources and experience enable the firm to anticipate and respond to the many demands created by multijurisdictional investigations and proceedings routinely pursued by investigative agencies in the U.S. and around the world.

Our various offices and depth of knowledge across the firm's practices enable us to conduct fact-finding and analysis in connection with some of the most complex cross-border investigations in virtually every country in which our clients conduct business.

We have attorneys in key financial centers in the Americas, Europe and Asia Pacific — many of whom are former prosecutors and/or regulators — who handle cross-border investigations across a broad range of topics. We have helped our clients with investigations involving, among other subjects, corruption/bribery, antitrust/cartels, money laundering, economic sanctions, customs and export controls, insider trading, market abuse and other financial institution regulatory issues, accounting, public company disclosures, securities and derivatives enforcement, and tax. When necessary, we are able to call upon a network of local counsel with whom we have long-established relationships.

The firm also has significant experience conducting internal investigations and compliance-related due diligence, as well as designing, implementing and reviewing compliance programs for multinational companies.

Our experience and reach in this space have been recognized by numerous publications. For example, Skadden was named The American Lawyer's 2017 White Collar/Regulatory Litigation Department of the Year. In 2017, we had more attorneys cited as leading lawyers globally in both Who's Who Legal: Investigations and Who's Who Legal: Business Crime Defense than any other firm. Skadden was named as having one of the top five practices worldwide in Global Investigations Review's 2017 "GIR 30," a ranking of leading firms handling internal and government-led investigations. We also received the award for "Global Dispute of the Year, Investigations" from The American Lawyer at its 2015 Global Legal Awards for our representation of 10 Swiss banks that obtained non-prosecution agreements from the U.S. Department of Justice pursuant to the DOJ Tax Division Program for Swiss banks. We also were ranked as a top firm for corporate investigations in Chambers Global 2018 and Chambers USA 2017, and named "Investigations Firm of the Year" at the 2015 and 2014 Who's Who Legal Awards.
