Mana Ghaemmaghamsi focuses on intellectual property and technology transactions, including matters focused on IP development and licensing, information security and privacy projects and the IP technology and privacy aspects of mergers, acquisitions and other corporate matters.

Ms. Ghaemmaghamsi has advised clients on the development of artificial intelligence policies and guidelines, as well as on issues related to content licensing for AI. Ms. Ghaemmaghamsi has extensive experience counseling on blockchain and digital asset-related matters and has advised clients regarding the offer and sale of NFTs, negotiated agreements with providers of digital wallet services and cryptocurrency exchanges, and advised on legal and regulatory issues relating to the issuance of a stablecoin and on privacy and open source issues related to Web3. In recognition of her work, Ms. Ghaemmaghamsi has been named a Rising Star in Fintech by Law360.

Ms. Ghaemmaghamsi has co-authored numerous articles on artificial intelligence and digital assets, and has spoken at conferences and presented CLE courses regarding legal issues around these technologies and the metaverse.

She also has an active pro bono practice, advising nonprofit organizations that assist and mentor youths through theater productions on a variety of matters. In addition, she actively serves as a mentor to current NYU School of Law students and law school-bound legal assistants.
