Michael McIntosh represents a broad range of U.S. and international clients in complex litigation matters in federal and state courts across the country.

Mr. McIntosh has litigated cases at all stages, from their inception through the conclusion of appellate proceedings. He has represented clients in cases presenting a diverse array of issues, including claims brought under the Antiterrorism Act of 1990 (ATA), the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO), the Lanham Act and state common law. In those and other cases, Mr. McIntosh has navigated complicated legal frameworks, shifting legal landscapes and complex factual records to identify creative solutions and implement successful strategies. Mr. McIntosh has extensive experience representing non-U.S. litigants in U.S. civil proceedings, including by developing defenses tailored to such non-U.S. litigants, ensuring compliance with applicable data protection regimes and adhering to necessary procedures for the service of judicial documents and the production of information.

Mr. McIntosh is a seasoned courtroom advocate, having argued a number of cases in federal appellate courts, federal district courts and state trial courts. He also has prepared cases for trial and was an integral member of the federal trial team that successfully defended an individual charged with insider trading. Mr. McIntosh has substantial experience representing clients in civil and criminal investigations at both the state and federal levels. In particular, he has assisted clients with navigating the challenges posed by parallel government investigations and civil litigation proceedings.

In addition, Mr. McIntosh dedicates a substantial amount of time to pro bono work. He represented the petitioner in proceedings before the U.S. Supreme Court in Moore v. Texas, which led to two rulings vacating his client's death sentence on Eighth Amendment grounds. Mr. McIntosh also has briefed and argued multiple pro bono appeals, including one in which he obtained habeas relief on behalf of a client whose confession was unconstitutionally admitted in state trial court.
