Anita Oh represents public and private companies in complex commercial transactions involving intellectual property, artificial intelligence and other emerging technologies. Ms. Oh regularly advises clients across the AI ecosystem on strategic transactions, compute and infrastructure commitments, IP and data licensing, and compliance with evolving regulatory frameworks. She also counsels clients in a broad range of industries, such as traditional and new media, fintech, gaming, robotics and defense.

Prior to starting her legal career, Ms. Oh was a broadcast journalist for a global television network. She has co-authored numerous articles on AI and digital assets. She also maintains an active pro bono practice, supporting initiatives that promote youth literacy and the arts and advising nonprofit organizations on IP, branding and technology licensing matters.

Her representative transactional matters include:

- a global leader in AI infrastructure in various matters
- Bytedance Ltd. in various matters, including data licensing agreements for AI model training, product counseling on AI products and features and privacy-related matters
