Ronald J. Tabak is experienced in death penalty and civil rights litigation. For example, he successfully argued Francis v. Franklin, a death penalty case, in the U.S. Supreme Court and played a leading role in securing Johnny Gates' removal from death row after 26 years. Mr. Tabak has chaired the Committee on Civil Rights of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York and co-chaired the New York State Bar Special Committee on Re-Entry, and is chair of the Death Penalty Committee of the American Bar Association's Section of Civil Rights and Social Justice. He has been a leader in the ABA's efforts to recruit and train lawyers for indigent death row inmates. He spearheaded the successful effort to get the ABA to call for a moratorium on executions until various due process concerns are resolved. He chaired the ABA Section of Civil Rights and Social Justice's Task Force on Mental Disability and the Death Penalty, whose proposals have been adopted as policies by the ABA, the American Psychological Association and the American Psychiatric Association.

Mr. Tabak coordinates the pro bono practice at Skadden worldwide. Under his oversight, each year over 1,000 attorneys at the firm handle pro bono cases suitable to their practices and interests. He established a special pro bono program in which most of the firm's summer associates actively participate and frequently involves the firm's legal assistants in pro bono matters. Mr. Tabak also is a member of the advisory committee for the Skadden Fellowship Program.

He has spoken on a range of topics, including pro bono matters, fellowship programs, capital punishment, habeas corpus and civil rights at numerous law schools, bar associations and civic groups on television and radio. He has written numerous articles on such subjects and, beginning in 2007, has authored the Capital Punishment chapter in the ABA Criminal Justice Section's book, The State of Criminal Justice. In 2017, Mr. Tabak organized and moderated an ABA/New York City Bar Association panel discussion on the experiences of the seven states that have abolished capital punishment in recent years and the implications for states that still have the death penalty. In January 2018, an edited and updated transcription of this program was posted on the homepage of the ABA Section of Civil Rights and Social Justice.

In addition, Mr. Tabak is experienced in energy, contract, antitrust, securities and entertainment litigation. He has been a principal litigator in complex litigation concerning the syndication of television programming. Mr. Tabak has worked with attorneys from the firm's Los Angeles office to secure favorable rulings in arbitration, court proceedings and administrative proceedings concerning the operations of North America's largest-producing oil and gas field. In addition, he was a member of a team that successfully represented respondents in an arbitration concerning gas for Hong Kong.
